

Student vote factor in 1907

the results indicated that some of the voters had changed their minds since the last referendum. Nonetheless, each student arrested represented an entry on the court docket—entries that had to be resolved by some sort of legal decision.

The outcome was anti-climactic. Reported the Telephone of June 5, all of the lawyers involved agreed that the charges should be dismissed. "The attorneys find there is absolutely no law on illegal voting in an option election, and that there can be no prosecutions, for such voting until a statute is passed by the legislature."
