

Attitudes have changed

(Continued from page 1)

frustration. In part the ad read, "... all persons, therefore, are hereby forewarned not to harbour, trust, or trade with her on my account ... This is only the beginning; other particulars in detail will shortly be published in a pamphlet."

Mindful of the hazards of marrying in haste, editor Deal reprinted a "sermonette" he had found in another newspaper. "What avail the graces of the finest figure, the most captivating address, or even the assemblage of all that is enchanting, if the heart be depraved or the conduct imprudent! ... If beauty alone excited his passion, it would cease to exist when you are deprived of those attractions upon which it was founded."

MEANWHILE, on the north side of the Bloomington square, the female seminary was continuing to train young women to think and speak clearly. It was no surprise, therefore, that some 30 years later, after females had been admitted to IU, that a prize for scientific oratory was awarded to a female.

Whatever would editor Deal have said about that?