

Tornado did strange things

lives of his family by taking them to the home of a neighbor. They had scarcely crossed the street when their home was lifted from its foundation and dashed to pieces. The furniture and timbers from the house were carried into vacant lots a short distance away."

By Nov. 17, the Courier informed its readers that some of the damage reports had been exaggerated. The estimate of financial loss had been reduced from $300,000 to $100,000.

A wire story out of Chicago noted that the tornado had skipped around in Wisconsin, Indiana and Illinois. "After an unusually warm November day Saturday ... The temperature dropped in several places more than 60 degrees in 18 hours."

It was a perfect formula for a tornado.
