

IU's class of 1881 not favorite of Professor Wylie

Looking back, from page C1

ring to Newkirk's class, "... soon after more made a break and the class broke up in confusion. So we will have our hands full and we will see whether the affair be passed over as lightly as it was last year."

It is apparent from Wylie's diary that he didn't think much of that been sighing when he wrote, "All is perfectly quiet and orderly about the college just now and hope it will continue. I hear that several are heartily ashamed of their action and regret it, but pride and consistency kept them back. Now it is too late. Will be glad when term closes and speeches are made and students and trustees have gone to their homes."
