

Harrodsburg women raid gambling game

---

Gambling, from page A1

---

innocent. "Hays made no defense and did not contradict the evidence of Mrs. Holmes and Mrs. Kinser..."

Hays' fine of $10 and costs would seem like a "slap on the wrist today." Judge Martin apparently thought it would be enough to show the accused the error of his ways. But in case Hays wasn't sufficiently impressed by the penalty, Martin, "promised to make it $100 for the next offense."

The turn of the century local newspapers do not give the impression that vice was rampant in the town of Harrodsburg, although it was rumored that quarry workers of the area had been known to indulge in some wagering and drinking of bootleg alcohol.

In any case, for a time, the town was law abiding enough to suit the women.