

Call tested dog's love

Looking back, from page C1

see the Mayor of McDoel (another nickname for Spencer) he started to turn round and round, and every other round he gave a plaintive little bark that said more than words can tell."

Someone thought it would be a good idea to re-run the experiment a couple of times more, and Tramp was put back up on the chair. Again he wagged his tail at the sound of Spencer's voice. But on the third try, the dog could not be "yached."

"Dank was not in the telephone box in the World office (the Courier's sister newspaper) — he was at home."

Concluded the Courier, "The experiment was a complete success, and this is probably the first time in Bloomington that the merits of the telephone system have been tested in this unique manner."

If Tramp could have been taught how to call home, he would have dialed 96. The Courier's phone number was 21.
