

Chiming in with reasons for ringing

the applicants for liquor licenses had withdrawn their applications.

Other entries in the "why the chimes rang" speculation indicated some of the tensions in the community and on campus:

- Professor Carl Eigenmann — "because all litigation over the Donaldson farm — the blind fish factory — had ended;"

- 1,000 telephone subscribers thought it was because the telephone company had agreed not to raise the rates;

- Director Sheldon thought it was because Purdue and Indiana had resumed athletic relations; and

- "Pro Bono Publico" thought that it was an announcement that the hitchrack would go and "Vox Populi" thought that it was going to stay.

So after all, why were the chimes ringing? According to the World, it was in honor of Charles William, editor-in-chief of the Indianapolis News, and his niece, Miss Estella Rose, of Brooklyn, N.Y., who were guests of the university.
